Facilitation Techniques for Business Analysts

2 Days

A key competency of the business analyst is effective facilitation; an essential set of skills for working with a group of stakeholders to elicit, document, analyze, validate and achieve consensus on requirements. Participants develop the ability to elicit requirements in a workshop setting while managing the group dynamics. Participants build confidence facilitating requirements workshops and dealing with difficult stakeholders. Through interactive role play, participants learn and practice the unique facilitation challenges facing business analysts today.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Improve your ability to elicit requirements in a workshop setting while managing the group dynamics. Build confidence facilitating requirements workshops and dealing with difficult stakeholders.

At the end of this course, you will be able to:

- Plan and lead a requirements workshop
- Apply active listening skills
- Elicit requirements while managing the dynamics of the group
- Deal with difficult stakeholders and conflict
- Lead a group to a consensus agreement

Students will practice their new skills in a variety of requirements gathering sessions, including interviews, small group sessions, larger, formal group sessions, virtual meetings and on-site observation.

Students provide constructive feedback to one another throughout the workshop
