

FLP1

Effective Interpersonal and Organizational Communication

4 Days

Effective leaders are able to use communication to ensure that individual, team and organizational goals are clearly understood. Participants examine the process of interpersonal communication and its influences.

PRE-COURSE PREPARATION

- There are pre-course readings and assignments for this course, as well as assignments to be completed during the course
- Each participant will complete an online questionnaire prior to the first day in class and receive their personal DYNAMIX® Profile report in class

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

- Managers, supervisors or team leaders
- Those looking to build a high-performing team
- Those aspiring to a supervisory or managerial role and would like a better grasp of what is expected of them as a leader

COURSE OUTLINE

Communication Essentials

- Learn the theories and concepts associated with interpersonal communication
- Use communication to establish priorities, generate ideas, resolve issues and assist in decision making
- Identify organizational communication structures and their influence on performance
- Learn more about the DYNAMIX® Profile and how it helps you to identify your behavioural preferences

Feedback and Listening Skills

- Explore the different ways in which we communicate within the workplace and how preferred behavioural patterns influence personal working style, interaction with others, decision-making, working within teams, and dealing with others.
- Understand how cultural variations influence our working relationships and why
- Examine the application of feedback, self-disclosure and empathic listening

The DYNAMIX® of Communication and Team Effectiveness
